Old parking bylaw may get scrapped

URBAN CORE

Move could discourage use of light rail,
say city staff

Lucy

Metro | Ottawa

More small restaurants and grocery stores may pop up in urban neighbourhoods, now that the City of Ottawa is overhauling a decades-old parking bylaw.

On Tuesday, the planning committee will debate amendments to a 1960s-era bylaw that requires minimum parking spaces for most developments in the inner urban core.

That current bylaw discourages people from leaving their cars at home and taking transit, a staff report on the new bylaw suggests, which doesn't make sense if the city is pouring billions of dollars into light rail transit.

"This runs counter to the goals of encouraging sustainable transportation and increased use of transit given the significant investment being made in the city's transit system," it reads, adding that the current rules "can create uncertainty and conflict in the community."

Under the new proposed bylaw, developments within a 400- to 800-metre walking distance from most light rail transit stations would not need parking. The exception is apartment buildings with more than 12 units, in which case some visitor parking will be required.

The proposed bylaw also seeks to protect the character of old urban communities that have roots dating back to the days before most people owned cars.

On urban main streets, low-rise apartment buildings will be exempt from parking requirements, as will some artist studios and offices. Other non-residential buildings may still need parking, but half the spaces currently required.

If council ultimately approves this bylaw on July 13, it could also allow smaller grocery stores to set up in so-called "food desert" neighbourhoods like Mechanicville or Centretown.

Currently, a 9,000-square metre Superstore has to provide 221 parking spots, while a small store like McKeen's Metro in the Glebe would need 21.

Under the new bylaw, grocery stores smaller than 1,500 square metres won't need parking and the same goes for restaurants smaller than 350 square metres (almost the size of an IMAX movie theatre screen).

5 THINGS TO DO IN OTTAWA THIS WEEKEND

Music, seafood, uniforms and cats: One-of-a-kind events in the city. HALEY RITCHIE METRO

1 Changing of the Guard (Sunday)

The ceremony starts on Sunday and will continue daily all summer until Aug. 21.

Catch the guards in their bright red uniforms and tall black hats at 10 a.m. — it's a colourful and musical spectacle. Remember to arrive early if you want a good spot beside all the tourists.

2 Dragon Boat Race

Cheer on colourful boats for a good cause while taking in some impressive bands and performers. Everything is free and takes place beside the water in Mooney's Bay Park, which runs until June 26. Headliners include July Talk, Mother Mother, Young Empires, Alvays and A Tribe Called Red. Races begin at 8 p.m. on Friday and continues 7 a.m. both Saturday and Sunday.

3 Just for Cats Video Festival

Do you love cat videos? Want to watch your favourite Internet cats on the big screen and raise funds for felines in need? Head to Dundonald Park from 6:30-10:30 p.m. for family-friendly "screenings of the best Internet cat videos on the planet, cat-inspired yoga, live dance and more." The event is free but the suggested donation is $5-10 per person. Proceeds benefit the Ottawa Humane Society and the Canadian Federation of Humane Societies. Saturday, rain date is Sunday.

5 Escapade

The electronic music extravaganza is back at the Rideau Carleton Raceway this weekend. There are too many sets to list here, but main stage names include Diplo, 4B, Martin Garrix, Dvbbs, Khaos, and Mike Robia. All weekend.

4 Bytowne Oyster Festival

We're just going to say it: this seafood celebration looks shucking awesome. Without a doubt, Ottawa's Whalesbone restaurant knows their oysters and they'll be hosting the ninth annual Oyster Fest at 504 Kent Street on Sunday from 12 p.m. to 10 p.m. Tickets are $30 and local craft beer, food, entertainment and shucking competitions are part of the day.

Driver caught on camera running into Ottawa cyclist

Joe Lofaro
Metro | Ottawa

Cycling advocates are calling for more spending on education and infrastructure after a shocking video emerged recently of an Ottawa cyclist getting plowed by a car on Donald Street.

"It's intense," was how Gareth Davies, president of Citizens for Safe Cycling, described the video, which has been posted on YouTube.

Cyclist Patrick Levesque was on a bike ride through Overbrook with his then-girlfriend when a car crashed into him and threw him onto the pavement.

"All I heard was a rev of the engine and a huge bang and then I fell on my a-- and slid," Levesque told Metro. "It happened so fast."

He posted a video of the April 23 incident on YouTube and it is getting plenty of attention on social media. In the video, you can hear a visibly upset Levesque angrily confronting the driver after the crash.

Davies said his group has been pushing for changes in the city to prevent incidents like this.

"Basically, accelerating our bike plan to build that network faster and continue to legitimize cycling as a mode of transportation so that it becomes more formalized in our everyday getting around," he said.

"We're years away from that, but the city can help get us there

11 a.m. Ottawa Police spokesman Const. Marc Soucy says it's believed the man behind the wheel was driving under the influence.

Adolphe Kwizera, 24, of Gatineau was charged with one count of refusing to provide a breath sample and one count of obstructing police. None of the allegations have been proven in court.

BACKSTAGE PASS

Band takes listeners on journey from punk to pop

Trevor Greenway
Metro | Ottawa

Kiel Burwell knows a lot about pigeonholes.

His band has been called everything from alt-rock, to punk, and reggae to funk, and pretty much everything in between.

But the lead guitarist for Ottawa's The Superlative says when you strip down all the similarities and influences, the band's sound really comes down to one thing.

"It's good old rock and roll, man," says Burwell.

"We've been called pop punk, we've been called all kinds of stuff. We have broken through a lot of genre barriers that a lot of bands have a hard time mixing and matching."

Part of what makes the band's sound so inclusive and accessible is the audience listening to it. With a massive net, The Superlative sweeps up fans as young as seven or eight with their alt-punk vibes while keeping older crowds interested with alternative rock infused with layers of funk, hip hop, pop and reggae.

We have broken through a lot of genre barriers.

Kiel Burwell

All the players in the band, including Burwell, drummer Zachary Lachance, vocalist Charles Lapointe, Guitarist J-P Lapointe and bassist Alex Tate pretty much come from that same heavy rock era of the late 90s to mid-2000s when bands like Tool, NIN, Deftones and System of a Down ruled the heavy rock world. But each member had a little side love, whether it was hip hop, reggae, funk or Top 40 mainstream pop that helped the band grow and reach new audiences.

"We all have guilty hip hop pleasures and mainstream pop music," admits Burwell, adding that the band's new album In Love & Debt is an accessible suite of songs that touch on nearly every genre of music that the players have been influenced by.

Take a bit of NOFX, mix it up with a bit of Simple Plan, add a touch of Ziggy Marley and top it off with a drizzle of Christina Aguilera and you've concocted a Superlative martini.

"We have a guilty pleasure for just the cheesiest pop songs, because we listen to them for production value and songwriting." Yeah, sure, Kiel.

The band went so far as covering Aguilera's Your Body, because they saw it as a "missed opportunity."

"It was one of those songs that was catchy, but just had so much more potential to be great," says Burwell, adding that the song got good reception from the pop queen herself: a retweet and a digital thumbs up.

"The pop version kind of didn't do enough justice for the people who wrote the song and for her to perform. I knew we could make it killer for rock fans and pop fans alike."

The Superlative will be jamming out that inclusive sound this Friday at Zaphod's as they release their third studio album, In Love & Debt. The night is a benefit for the Fort McMurray Relief Fund with all door sales and $1 from every CD sold going to the cause.

The show starts at 8 p.m. and also features local bands Metronome Jones and Missioner. Tickets are $10.

Spike up your punk Mohawk, let your dreadlocks flow and let your metal hair droop to the floor — this show is for everyone.

PAKENHAM

Behind the mash with Cartwright Springs Brewery's André Rieux

THE BOTTLENECK

Jordan Duff

Last year, brewer André Rieux was part of the team that opened Cartwright Springs Brewery in Pakenham, about a half hour from Ottawa. The brewery was named after the fresh water spring that it sourced for brewing. After speaking with Rieux, it became evident that the spring was crucial in the establishment of the brewery.

Rieux wasn't always a professional brewer. Though he learned to homebrew while attending university (where most of us learned to drink), he began his professional life in the high-tech sector and went on to work all over the globe. Through this international exposure, Rieux learned to dive headfirst into new experiences, cultures and flavours. This adventurous spirit extended to extreme sports and, now, to opening a brewery.

There are plenty of fantastic tales of brewers leaving their old jobs and embarking on a new career in the exciting world of beer.

Rieux's story, however, also has a touch of mysticism, or perhaps fate. Seriously.

Not long ago, Rieux was sitting at his desk with a pile of work ahead of him when he suddenly had the urge to check multiple listing service maps to look for rural properties for sale.

While I'd write this off as procrastinating, Rieux insists there was a strange call guiding him to further investigate a listing that was simply, and poorly, described as: "77 acres of undeveloped land".

When the workday was done, our curious adventurer was off to the Pakenham area to explore the plot on snowshoes. As I'm hearing this story, I almost wish I was writing this as a beer-y Christmas story. The beauty of the area impressed Rieux so much that he nearly missed a winding stream that he followed to the source. It was a groundwater-fed fresh-water spring. According to Rieux, "that artesian spring sealed the deal and changed my life." He bought the property and began using the water to brew.

While he insists the water didn't make him a better brewer, it did provide him with an essential ingredient for making better beer.

CS Brewery has been well received in the Pakenham area and the community is very supportive. In fact, Cartwright Springs Brewery ran a very successful kickstarter campaign to help build the brewery. The company feels at home and welcome at the many events in the area. If you're inspired to sample some of this bottled fate, there are a few bars locally that feature CS Beer on tap or visit the brewery (and see the spring!) Friday to Monday.

Summer day camp connects urban children with outdoors

Haley Ritchie
Metro | Ottawa

What can you learn by getting dirt on your hands and pine needles in your hair? A whole lot, according to the organizers of a local summer camp that promises to take kids where the wild things are.

"It's basically about getting kids into nature," said Brittany Boychuk, who runs summer camp Nature Connections with her partner Alister Augé and a range of Ottawa partner organizations.

The summer day camps operate out of the Just Food farm, a large green space about a 20-minute drive from downtown Ottawa. The day is spent outside — no matter what the weather — and focuses on farming, survival skills and outdoor wisdom.

Camp leader Alister Augé explores life in the greenhouse with campers. CONTRIBUTED Boychuk said the accessible location (there's a bus stop out front) allow children living in the most urban parts of the city a chance to return home with a new perspective.

"A lot of our philosophy is that nature is all around us, even in the city," she said.

"Nature is all around us, even in the city."

Brittany Boychuk

or a single edible plant," she said.

Boychuk said there's time for practical skills like fort-building and growing food and also time for pondering big questions like the role of humans in the natural world.

The programming is timely: this month national non-profit ParticipACTION released its annual report card looking at children and youth.

The report gave Canadian students a low grade for a lack of physical activity and warns of the "protection paradox" that has parents keeping their kids indoors to try and keep them safe.

Programs like Nature Connections, and similar efforts to get kids outside across the country, are pushing back.

"People seem to be afraid of nature, but we need to look at the idea of risk," she said.

"Kids are often not allowed to take very small, calculated risks in the city. It makes it more likely they'll hurt themselves later in life if they don't have a sense of self and know what they're capable of and what they're not."

ROAD CRIME

Charges laid in road rage

A 30-year-old man is facing charges after a violent road rage incident in Cornwall, Ont.

Local police say the attack began when the man allegedly grew angry at another driver and began hitting the other vehicle with a bar. Police allege the incident then moved further down the road.

At that point, police say the man got back into his car and drove directly into the other vehicle.

Duffy still on the hook

POLITICS

Senator previously acquitted on 31 charges

The interminable spectre of the Mike Duffy spending scandal reared its ugly head yet again Thursday as the Senate found itself once more locked in a battle with the controversial senator over dubious expenses.

This time, however, the expenses in question were from claims well-canvassed during Duffy's criminal trial, which ended earlier this year in his sensational acquittal on 31 charges of fraud, breach of trust and bribery.

In that acquittal, Ontario Court Judge Charles Vaillancourt excoriated the Senate for spending rules that lacked clarity and oversight, allowing senators to claim expenses for anything related to what they deemed Senate business.

The Senate committee that polices spending has asked Duffy to repay seven of his claims totalling $16,955, despite last April's court decision.

It marks the first time since late March that a senator has been asked to reimburse questionable spending — an order Duffy is fighting and could soon be entitled to take up with a special arbitrator. The arbitration process was originally set up to handle disputes arising from a federal audit of Senate spending — a review that missed Duffy initially, because he was under RCMP investigation and facing criminal charges.

Duffy has been subject to an audit once before on Senate orders, by auditing firm Deloitte. That 2013 audit looked only at his housing expenses and ended with a Senate committee ordering Duffy to repay $90,000, which he did after then-prime minister Stephen Harper's chief of staff, Nigel Wright, gave him the cash in order to take away a potential political headache for the Conservative government.

Some senators on the committee tasked with oversight of Senate spending wanted auditor general Michael Ferguson to come back and review more of Duffy's spending, but the majority of committee members opted against rekindling the controversy.

But details that emerged during Duffy's criminal trial led Senate administrators to take another look at his spending, with the head of Senate finance alerting the Senate's internal economy committee to the questionable claims.

All eyes on Brexit results

The world watched with bated breath as the polls closed Thursday in Britain's historic referendum on membership in the European Union. Throughout the night, results were too close to call. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Britain's referendum on whether to leave the European Union was too close to call early Friday, with increasingly mixed signals challenging earlier indications that "remain" had won a narrow victory.

The British pound soared after two leading supporters of the "leave" campaign said it appeared the pro-EU side had won, then plummeted as Britain's first counting areas reported their results. The stage was set for a nerve-racking night of ballot-counting after a day of high turnout and foul weather.

"It may be possible that the experts are going to have egg on their face later on tonight," University of Strathclyde political scientist John Curtice told the BBC after results from Newcastle showed worse-than-expected figures for pro-European vote. "It may be the first sign that the 'remain' side are not going to do as well as those early polls suggested."

A vote to leave the EU would destabilize the 28-nation trading bloc, created from the ashes of the Second World War to keep the peace in Europe. A "remain" vote would nonetheless leave Britain divided and the EU scrambling to reform.

As the polls closed Thursday, U.K. Independence Party leader Nigel Farage set a downbeat tone for the supporters of a British exit — or Brexit — from the EU, telling Sky News television "it looks like 'remain' will edge it" in the referendum.

But he walked back those comments in later, telling reporters at a "leave" party in central London that "maybe just under half, maybe just over half of the country" had voted to pull Britain out of the EU.

Pollster Ipsos MORI said a survey conducted on Wednesday and Thursday suggested the "remain" side would win Britain's EU referendum by a margin of 54 per cent to 46 per cent.

The overseas territory of Gibraltar was the first to report results late Thursday, and as expected the British enclave reported an overwhelming vote for "remain" — 96 per cent.

+ FIRST RESULTS

■ The first results, from England's working-class northeast, were a smaller-than-expected "remain" win of 50.7 per cent in Newcastle and a bigger-than-expected "leave" vote of 61 per cent in nearby Sunderland.

There as elsewhere, turnout appeared high. Officials in Gibraltar said almost 84 per cent of eligible voters turned out to cast ballots. High turnout was expected to boost the "remain" vote, because "leave" supporters are thought to be more motivated. But high turnout in working-class areas that typically have lower tallies could also boost the "leave" vote.

Kevin Featherstone, the head of the European Institute, said that whichever way things went, the vote should serve as a wakeup call to politicians about re-engaging with voters.

REFERENDUM

How Canada might be affected

The results of Thursday's Brexit referendum will send ripples around the globe. If the U.K. leaves the European Union, the news could hit Canadians on a number of fronts:

Fewer exports

Finance Minister Bill Morneau says Canadian businesses that invested in the U.K. to access the European market may be forced to rethink their strategies.

"We're watching in Canada and we're anxious," Morneau said. Canada could also lose out on some of the benefits of the Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement (CETA), the country's trade agreement with the EU.

Canada exported almost $16 billion worth of products to the U.K. in 2015, or about three per cent of total exports, which makes it Canada's third-largest trading partner behind the U.S. and China.

If the U.K. stays in the EU, that means big savings for Canadian businesses. But if the U.K. leaves, it would have to negotiate its own deal with Canada, a lengthy process that could take decades.

Lower returns

Canadian Mark Carney, governor of the Bank of England, has warned that a Brexit could trigger financial instability in the country. That's bad news

Governor of the Bank of England Mark Carney has warned that a Brexit could trigger financial instability in the U.K., at least in the short term. JOE GIDDENS/WPA POOL/GETTY IMAGES for Canadians with investments in the U.K. Canadians invested almost $69 billion in the U.K. in 2014, according to Statistics Canada, or 8.3 per cent of foreign investment.

Many Canadians also have money tied up in Britain through retirement funds such as the Canada Pension Plan.

According to the CPP Investment Board, about $20 billion, or 7.5 per cent of the plan's assets, are in the U.K.

Stronger U.S. dollar

A Brexit could throw the British economy into turmoil, weakening the pound against the U.S. dollar.

U.S. Federal Reserve chair Janet Yellen warned that a hike to the dollar caused by European uncertainty could slow the U.S. economy by discouraging trade.

And a stronger U.S. dollar would make it even more expensive to travel in the U.S., throwing a curve ball in Canadian's summer vacation plans.

Housing market stays hot

A Brexit could further fuel Canada's white-hot housing market, according to BMO Nesbitt Burns, because global market uncertainty caused by Brexit might keep interest rates low.

"In that event, the Fed will remain on ice even longer and Canadian rates will again probe all-time lows, keeping mortgage rates at an extremely low ebb and thus further fanning the flames in the domestic housing market," said BMO chief economist Douglas Porter and senior economist Robert Kavcic.

Young workers want clearer office, home divisions

The work-life balance in European countries seems the stuff of dreams to many Canadians.

France has a 35-hour work week and recently gave employees the right to disconnect from email after they leave the office.

Sweden, meanwhile, offers workers a minimum five weeks paid vacation time.

And many Scandinavian companies have implemented a system of flexible hours and working from home as management encourages employees to craft schedules that fit their personal needs.

While Prime Minister Justin Trudeau managed to sneak a day off during a recent work trip abroad to celebrate his wedding anniversary, that kind of flexibility isn't afforded to most working Canadians despite work-life balance being a hot topic for years.

The Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development has found that the average Canadian works 1,704 hours annually, more than in Germany and Australia although less than those apparently tireless workers in the United States.

But as younger generations in Canada move into the workforce and demand more scheduling flexibility and clearer divisions between the office and home, companies will have to do more than just talk the talk and actually implement concrete policies to attract and keep talented workers, says one researcher who's studied the issue here for more than 20 years.

an optional discussion point pretty soon," said Linda Duxbury, a professor at Carleton University's Sprott School of Business. "To keep younger talent, you're going to have to deliver on it."

Employees crave a supportive work culture that enables a work-life balance, said Lidia Pawlikowski, a senior consultant of health and wellness at Morneau Shepell, a human resources consulting company founded by the father of Canada's current finance minister, Bill Morneau.

Workers want to take guilt-free lunch breaks, squeeze a workout into their day and not remain glued to their smartphones after hours, she said.

HOUSING

Panel to review market

The federal government is creating a working group on housing with the Ontario and British Columbia governments as well as officials from Vancouver and Toronto amid warnings that housing prices in those cities are rising at an unsustainable pace.

Overall, the housing market is "sound," but pockets of risk have emerged since the financial crisis, Finance Minister Bill Morneau said Thursday.

The government has already taken steps to protect borrowers and lenders, Morneau said, but more steps can be taken, if warranted, to help maintain a stable housing market.

Morneau recently increased the minimum down payment for homes over $500,000, a measure aimed specifically at cooling the Vancouver and Toronto markets.

The working group will meet through the summer to review factors that affect housing supply and demand, affordability and stability of the market.

DECODED Sports injuries

WHAT'S THE DEAL WITH TURF TOE?

Toronto Blue Jays star Jose Bautista lost a fight with a solid wall at the edge of the outfield during a game against the Phillies in Philadelphia last week. He smashed right into it, foot first, and was diagnosed with turf toe. He earned himself a 15-day disability leave and has to wear a walking boot. What is turf toe anyways? We explain.

WHAT IS TURF TOE?

Turf toe is a sprain to the ligament of the first metatarsophalangeal joint. That means the flexible, tough connective tissues around the large big-toe joint are stretched and damaged, sometimes torn.

WHAT CAN BE DONE ABOUT IT?

Swelling and pain are treated with ice and anti-inflammatory meds and the foot is stabilized to prevent further injury. If there are complications or severely torn tissues, surgery may be needed.

TOETALLY SERIOUS

The big toe (or, to use medical lingo, the great toe or Hallux) is one of the leading sources of athletic injuries. Without a functioning big toe, an athlete can lose "push-off strength" — aka Bautista's ability to sail off of first base. In nastier cases, without effective treatment, such an injury can eventually lead to deformity, chronic pain or joint degeneration (arthritis).

HOW DOES TURF TOE HAPPEN?

The most common way is hyperextension: As the foot is smashed into the ground (or, say, an outfield wall), the large big-toe joint bends too far upward, outside of its natural range of motion.

PINK HILLS

It's not as delicious as it sounds: Watermelon Snow is the nickname given to the pink algae blooming across the European Arctic. Rose-hued snow reflects 13 per cent less sunlight than the white stuff. That makes the ground and air heat up more, creating slushy puddles — the algae's favourite habitat. And so begins a vicious cycle.

DIETER'S DREAM

Chocolate with less than 36 per cent fat doesn't melt nicely and tends to clog factory machines. But a new study shows jolting low-fat chocolate with electricity helps it flow, creating a tasty candy with 10 per cent less fat.

DEFINITION

A Eukaryote is a living thing with cells that contain a nucleus (a cellular "brain" with DNA) and organelles (cellular organs) enclosed in membranes. All species are eukaryotes except bacteria and archae, which are prokaryotes.

Can math prove aliens are real (or not?)

My friend Chris says it's mathematically proven that aliens exist. Is that legit?
— Megan, Ottawa

Chris's view that extraterrestrials — complex, intelligent aliens — exist now, or have existed at some point, is no longer fringe.

When I learned about the planets in our solar system in school, scientists weren't sure any others existed. NASA has since confirmed more than 3,000 exoplanets outside the orbit of the sun but still in our immediate celestial neighbourhood. More than 200 are temperate and earth-like. That's what we can see with our rudimentary technology.

The Milky Way is home to an estimated hundred billion planets. In the May edition of Astrobiology, University of Rochester astrophysicist Adam Frank and colleagues crunched the numbers and concluded, "While we do not know if any advanced extraterrestrial civilizations currently exist in our galaxy, we now have enough information to conclude that they almost certainly existed at some point." He put the odds at one in a septillion (that's a 1 with 24 zeroes). But not so fast. We have no idea how unusual the phenomenon of life is in the universe — particularly complex, multicellular life.

The event that created complex cells like animals and plants happened, as far as we know, just once in the three-billion-year history of life on Earth. We don't know if that's less or more often than what would be expected by chance. And it's only been 13.7 billion years since the Big Bang.

It's reasonable to assume that a great portion of the extraterrestrial life that's out there, if there is any, is single-celled and looks something like pond scum.

To quote Atlantic magazine editor Ross Anderson, "Fancy math can't make aliens real."

PSYCHOLOGY

Apocalyptic plot lines help audiences deal with stress

Richard Crouse
For Metro Canada

In today's world it's not enough to be a hero. Now you must be a superhero. Liberating a cat from a tree or performing the Heimlich manoeuvre is considered HeroLite™.

Unlike the old days when square-jawed movie stars rescued damsels in distress or battled cold-hearted landlords, today's champions won't get out of bed for anything less than the threat of complete world annihilation.

This weekend the heroes of Independence Day: Resurgence join Mystique, Quicksilver, Leonardo, Raphael, Michelangelo, Donatello, Captain America and legendary do-gooders Batman and Superman in some good, old-fashioned world saving.

The 20-years-in-the-making sequel to Will Smith's mega-hit sees aliens from outside the Solar System attack our planet. It's life and death on a planetary scale.

It's not a surprise the stories are getting larger and louder. Audiences want a big bang for their buck and Hollywood is pleased to oblige with high-stakes situations that provide frenetic action and happy endings (unless, of course you're rooting for the bad guy).

These days Hollywood also looks to overseas markets for mega-revenue and presenting globe-spanning stories helps to attract crowds in other countries. Business aside, why have audiences embraced world-on-the-brink movies?

Films, says Dr. Norman Holland, Marston-Milbauer Eminent Scholar Emeritus at the University of Florida, work on different parts of your brain.

"The parts that turn off are the parts that plan action because you're not going to act on what you see on the screen in front of you," he says.

"You accept the most improbable things, like Stars Wars or Spider-Man or whatever.

"At the same time the lower centres of your brain are generating emotions like mad in response to what you're seeing. This is the peculiar phenomenon that you can feel and care about these people on the screen while at the same time knowing they are nothing but a fiction."

In these heroic tales good almost always wins out, a comforting antidote to the nightly news where stories often don't have happy endings. It makes us feel good, but, as Dr. Holland notes, it's also restful.

"As you know they are re-designing movie theatres with recliner chairs so you can sleep through the movie," he says.

"Yes, it is relaxing. This is the part of your brain that worries, that plans for the future, that is concerned about the state of your body.

"All that shuts down. It's restful, no question."

Going to the movies is restful? Good for us? Seems like in our busy, stressful world it's the films that are the heroes, not the characters.

Talking the talk of Thrones

DIALECT

A girl may have no name, but she does have an accent

Colin McNeil
Metro | Canada

The voices in Game of Thrones are often as colourful as the characters themselves, and if you've ever looked in the bathroom mirror and given it your best "You know nothing Jon Snow," you're not alone.

John Fleming is a speech and dialect coach based in Toronto who teaches actors the ins and outs of accents and affectations. A Game of Thrones fan himself, he uses some Westerosi patios when he's working with actors.

Sounding out Westeros

A map of Westeros — which looks suspiciously like Great Britain — will clue you in on who speaks with what kind of accent. The northern end of the fictional continent is, aurally speaking, analogous to the north of England, and so on.

"They've separated the seven kingdoms, to a degree, by dialect," explains Fleming. "So all the people from Winterfell speak with a northern accent; something a little bit closer to Manchester or up in that belt between Manchester and Scotland." Think: Ned Stark, Jon Snow.

"It works well geographically compared to the Lannisters," who all speak with what's called Received Pronunciation — the standard British accent associated with posh southerners.

While most GoT actors do hail from the U.K., many are masking their natural accents in favour of one that better fits their character. Here, Fleming helps us connect the dots between fictional characters and real-world speech.

Tyrrion Lannister

The outcast Lannister is a great example of an American putting on Received Pronunciation, says Fleming. Listen closely and you'll hear him distinctively halt his speech after nearly every phrase.

Ser Davos

Ser Davos Seaworth is played by Irish-born Liam Cunningham "who has a very thick Irish accent," says Fleming. He is "one of the only people on the show who puts on a Geordie accent, which is from Newcastle ... right up in the northeast, near the Scottish border."

Landing during the first couple of seasons, he spoke something that was quite close to Received Pronunciation. As soon as he left King's Landing, you started to hear more of his Irish qualities."

Ygritte

Fleming tells us actress Rose Leslie is actually Scottish nobility, who was educated in England. Her natural speech is fairly English, "but she puts on that very quintessential northern English accent" for the role.

Petyr Baelish, a.k.a. Little Finger

Aiden Gillan plays the former Master of Coin and brothel keeper everyone loves to hate. "He's Irish," notes Fleming, "but in The Wire, he spoke with perfect general American, even a little bit tinged with Baltimore."

He notes a deliberate change in the actor's pronunciation as the show goes on. "When he was in King's

Oberyn Martell

The Martell's accent is "a little bit Spanish, and a little bit Arabic and so it gives it this kind of Northern African feel. It fits with the design elements they're going with" for Dorne, Fleming says.

TV TOURISM

With the season coming to an end, relive GoT in Croatia

Wawn Himmelsbach
For Metro Canada

At the War Photo exhibit in Dubrovnik, there's an image that stands out: a sweeping staircase, eerily deserted during shelling that destroyed more than 60 per cent of the medieval walled city after Croatia declared independence from Yugoslavia in 1991.

Two decades on, and this UNESCO heritage site has been restored to its former glory as the jewel of the Adriatic. And that staircase — now packed with tourists taking selfies — is known to millions of people around the world: It's where Cersei Lannister begins her "walk of shame" on Game of Thrones.

The TV series — based on the fantasy novels A Song of Ice and Fire and distributed by HBO — is filmed in multiple locations, from Iceland to Ireland, Morocco and Spain. In season one, the fictional fortified port city of King's Landing was filmed in Malta, but has now made its home in Dubrovnik (my GoT guide tells me it's because of significant tax breaks offered in Croatia).

But it's more than that. Sure, there's a lot of CGI in GoT — like dragons, White Walkers and such — but it wasn't hard to transform Dubrovnik into the stronghold of the Lannister family, which uses the city's existing medieval fortifications, guard towers and narrow streets to double as King's Landing. They're the real deal.

This staircase in Dubrovnik's Old Town was used as the starting point for Cersei Lannister's walk of shame on the season five finale of Game of Thrones. PHOTOS BY WAWN HIMMELSBACH

Like this staircase, where Cersei begins her walk of shame in "Mother's Mercy." Just add an angry crowd, a High Sparrow and a naked Cersei — and voilà.

In fact, actress Lena Headey, who was pregnant at the time, used a body double for this scene, though she did multiple takes to act out the facial expressions — and, through the magic of post-production, her head appears on the body double.

Several key scenes were filmed in the Old Town: at the Pile and Ploče gate, on St. Dominika street and along the city walls. Wander the streets and you might stumble upon Littlefinger's brothel, or walk in Daenerys' footsteps around Minčeta Tower where she disappears into the House of the Undying in Qarth.

Dubrovnik's Fort Lavrijenac was a stand-in for the Red Keep, and a number of scenes were filmed here, including the tournament thrown in honour of

King Joffrey's name day and the spot where The Hound saves Sansa from being raped.

Not only do you get a stunning view of the Adriatic Sea from atop Fort Lavrijenac, you'll also notice a parking lot on a dramatic rocky outcropping. Sure, it's a cool spot for a parking lot, but it's also where Joffrey's wedding/death scene was shot.

The nearby Island of Lokrum was used for scenes in Qarth. And Arboretum Trsteno — a renaissance garden dating back to the 15th century — doubles as the gardens of King's Landing. They're relatively untouched by CGI; you almost expect Varys to walk around the corner.

Dubrovnik isn't the only Croatian location used in GoT, though. Split, further north on the Dalmatian coast, doubles as Meereen. Within Split's historic Diocletian's Palace, several scenes were filmed: from the dungeon where Tyrion unchains Daenerys' dragons to the spot where Ser Barristan is slain.

Head into the countryside to the ruins of Klis Fortress and you'll easily recognize the road to Meereen, where Daenerys freed the slaves and, later, crucified the masters. The fortress has a history just as interesting as a fictional story: ask your GoT guide about the "sky toilet."

Wandering through Croatia's historic sites, it may feel like you're on the set of GoT (there's even a replica of the iron throne on Lokrum). But while the night may be dark and full of terrors, Croatia is anything but.

Live life to the f

The united states of BBQ-ing

ROAD TRIP

Love of meat, rubs and sauces crosses any political divides

David Bateman
For Torstar News Service

I thought barbecue was simple. Buy meat, heat meat, eat meat.

After nine weeks in the U.S., I realize how wrong I had been. From state to state and city to city, the meat, rub, sauce, sides, wood and cooking method change drastically. There is only one constant. From presidents to paupers, nothing brings Americans of all creeds and colours together quite like barbecue.

First stop: Detroit, Mich., where Slows Bar BQ stands like a glowing ember of success among a desolate bed of charcoal. Here, and across the Midwest, sauce is everything.

"Anyone can barbecue, not many places can do you a good sauce," says customer and Detroit native Brandon Johnson. His father's recipe is the glue that bonds his family. "Before any event, my cousins make sure my dad is on the grill before they come."

I drive south through the golden-ombre crop fields of Ohio to laidback Louisville, Ky., where I meet dungaree-clad Smoke-town USA owner Eric Gould, the selfbranded "Redneck Jew," so-called for his religion and love of hunting. "The Johnsons taught me how to barbecue. They were wonderful neighbours," says the pitmaster with wispy white side-burns that resemble tiny clouds.

At 20, 46-year-old Gould suffered a brain aneurysm and had been given a two per cent chance to live. "I'm here because I believe in myself and I love people. Life is about how you treat people. I love them. That's my secret ingredient."

After six hours in a very high-heat wood-fired smoker, Gould's pork ribs (he also does beef) are so succulent and tearable I can leave teeth marks in the bone.

My next rack of pork ribs involve a lot more vigorous chewing. Before taking to the brights lights of Broadway in Nashville, Tenn., I line up for an hour at Edley's Bar-B-Que, a roadside barbecue ranch, for hard-crust-ed charcoal crunchy ribs that are more familiar, though less gratifying, to my British palate.

In Memphis, I discover one reason why former resident Elvis Presley's weight ballooned — the irresistible dry rub of Charlie Vergos' Rendezvous.

The pork ribs initially look so parched I think they'll grate my mouth like I had licked tarmac. But when the Cajun coating is ripped apart, juice spurts free to reveal easily chewable, pink-lined meat.

Elvis was not the only king to eat at Rendezvous. Long before U.S. President Barack Obama and former U.S. presidents George W. Bush and Bill Clinton visited, it welcomed civil rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr., who was shot a short walk away at the Lorraine Motel, which now houses the National Civil Rights Museum.

After a few hours of solemn American history, I eat at the nearby Central BBQ, where sauce is shunned in favour of a traditional Tennessee dry rub.

"The first week I worked here, an old man in the back said, 'Tom, sauce is what you put on the meat you screw up. You're not going to screw up my meat, are you?'" says Thomas Strange, who has been the restaurant's manager for the past three years.

Strange advises where to go next in search of America's other main barbecue meat. "I make the best brisket in Memphis," he says. "It's still not a brisket town. Texas comes here for pork, we go there for beef."

Soon, I'm driving on 10-lane highways past gun ranges and signs warning me I'm going to hell. I'm in Texas, where locals brim with barbecue patriotism, almost as devoted to the fat-lined brisket as the Stars and Stripes on their porches.

At Pizzitola's BBQ in Houston, the waitress hears my Scottish accent and decides I should read the menu and she will order for me. "You'll love the brisket and then you'll love me," Cindy Amolochitis says. Well, she is half right. Like the locals, the Texas brisket warmly embraces you. The state slogan says you shouldn't mess with Texas, and they don't mess with the meat, save for a smattering of salt and black pepper.

From the well-established mom-and-pop joint of Houston, I go to La Barbecue, a gleaming new food truck in Austin. The lineup is continuously 60-strong on a Wednesday morning.

On the benches of La Barbecue's lot, suited lawyers tear beef and pork ribs next to unemployed students. Rich to poor, black to white, Detroit to Texas, barbecue is the great equalizing obsession in a deeply splintered country.

Smoke-town USA owner Eric Gould adds a 1-2-3 rub combo of salt, pepper and granulated garlic that packs a flavourful punch. DAVID BATEMAN/FOR TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Redblacks will be battling injuries, envy in 2016 season

The Ottawa Redblacks took just two seasons to build a winning team. Now their task is maintaining the form that got them all the way to last year's Grey Cup final.

While the Redblacks were a surprise success last year — advancing to the championship game one year after a dreadful inaugural campaign — they'll be on every team's radar this season after their hard-fought 26-20 loss to Edmonton in the 2015 Grey Cup. They will have to contend with their newfound notoriety, and some early injuries, as they try to lay the groundwork for continued success in Ottawa.

"From the get-go in year one we wanted to grow up as fast as we could and just become another team in this league that competes like everybody else," said head coach Rick Campbell. "We've always wanted to have a winning culture."

Last season the Redblacks went 12-6 and led the league in net offence, fewest yards allowed, total sacks and interceptions.

While the Redblacks parted ways with a number of players integral to the team's success, a strong core remains. That group includes veteran quarterback Henry Burris, voted the CFL's most outstanding player last season.

Burris was instrumental to the Redblacks' successful run, and at 41 he appears healthy and determined going into the season.

"My age is what it is," said Burris. "I've put my body in the position to be able to play this young man's game through my training. I might not be as quick as I was, but I've found other ways mentally to get the job done."

Burris is expected to carry the workload, but management added insurance by signing Trevor Harris.

Whether Burris or Harris are at work they will have familiar targets in receivers Ernest Jackson, Brad Sinopoli, Chris Williams and Greg Ellingson who each connected for 1,000 yards last season.

The Redblacks were relatively injury free in 2015, but this year the team has already suffered a major setback.

Running back William Powell is done for the season after suffering a ruptured Achilles.

Travon Van will be given the opportunity to take on the starter's role to open the season.

The Redblacks will also be without right guard Nolan MacMillan, who will be sidelined two months with a wrist injury, and fullback Brendan Gillanders, who is out with a knee injury.

Jaime Elizondo takes over as offensive co-ordinator from Jason Maas, who moved to Edmonton for an opportunity as head coach. Bob Dyce comes in as special teams co-ordinator.

The Redblacks' defence is minus five starters from last season. Much of the workload will fall on defensive lineman Zack Evans, linebacker DaMaso Munoz and lineman Arnaud Gascon-Nadon, who signed as a free agent. The Redblacks will once again be looking for big contributions from third-year defensive back Antoine Pruneau, who has improved each year.

Ottawa's big-game experience will be crucial to its success.

"One of the things that helped us last year was the fact we were able to stay healthy and that's something we just can't control," said running back Patrick Lavoie. "We have high expectations for ourselves. We haven't forgotten what it was like to lose at the Grey Cup. We had some great games on the way, but that last one still hurts."

33 TDs

Backup QB Trevor Harris was widely considered a top free agent after the 30-year-old took the reins from an injured Ricky Ray and threw for 4,354 yards and 33 TDs with the Argos last year.

Canadians carry high picks at draft

On the eve of finding out his hockey future, Logan Brown admitted to a case of the nerves.

"It's tough," said the six-foot-six, 220-pound centre from the Windsor Spitfires. "Like it's the greatest time of my life, but it's also the worst. I'm ready for it to happen. Just real anxious."

Brown likely won't have to wait long. The big centre from Chesterfield, Mo., who is the son of former NHLer Jeff Brown, is ranked seventh among North American skaters by NHL Central Scouting.

Canadian teams will figure prominently in Friday night's draft, with Toronto picking first, Winnipeg second, Edmonton fourth, Vancouver fifth, Calgary sixth, Montreal ninth and Ottawa 12th.

But Canadian talent may have to wait its turn behind U.S. and other foreign players.

American Auston Matthews is expected to go first overall, followed by Finns Patrik Laine and Jesse Puljujarvi.

Brown may be anxious but the well-spoken 18-year-old is mature enough to keep things in perspective.

"When you look at it closely, it's tough and it's stressful. But when you really look back and you look at the position that we're in, it's going to be awesome. We're getting drafted in the NHL (Friday) night. It's what I've been working for for about 16 years now."

It's a once-in-a-lifetime thing ... I definitely don't take it for granted.

Auston Matthews

met the media Thursday afternoon.

While Brown admitted to butterflies, it seemed just another day at the office for Matthews. The six-foot-two 216-pound centre, who excelled playing in the top Swiss league last season, was as cool as a cucumber in front of the media.

"I'm definitely enjoying it," he said of the pre-draft experience. "It's a once-in-a-lifetime thing. Not every 18-year-old is in this position, in this situation. So for me, I definitely don't take it for granted."

Matthews seems ready for anything — even playing in the fishbowl that is the Toronto Maple Leafs. He says he is unfazed by being tagged with a franchise centre label.

"To me it's fine. That's obviously what I want to be — a No. 1 centreman. I like watching guys like Anze Kopitar, Jonathan Toews. I think if you look at those two and how much of a factor they are to these teams, it's something I really like to watch."

Giants earn 12th win in last 14 games

A makeshift lineup was more than enough for the San Francisco Giants.

Joe Panik hit a bases-loaded triple, Mac Williamson launched a 446-foot home run and the Giants beat the Pirates 5-3 in Pittsburgh Thursday for their 12th win in 14 games.

The NL West leaders, already missing injured Hunter Pence and Chris Duffy, played without regulars Brandon Belt, Gregor Blanco, Brandon Crawford and Angel Pagan in the starting lineup.

"I'm proud of these guys with what we've gone through," manager Bruce Bochy said. "You find a way to win the game with a rookie who battled very well today against a good club, a club we haven't had a lot of success against here and it is, it's a great feeling."

Pittsburgh has lost 11 of 14, and fell five games under .500.

Sixers take Simmons No. 1

The Philadelphia 76ers selected LSU freshman Ben Simmons with the No. 1 pick in the NBA draft Thursday night.

The 76ers grabbed the versatile six-foot-10 forward from Australia who averaged 19.2 points, 11.8 rebounds and 4.8 assists last season.

Shooting guard Jamal Murray was the top Canadian taken at No. 7 by Denver, while Toronto selected centre Jakob Poeltl ninth overall.

RECIPE Slow Cooker Butter Chicken

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh For Metro Canada

Your slow cooker does all the work for this lightened up Butter Chicken. There's next to no prep time but you'll come home and have a delicious, creamy dinner on the table before you could order it in.

Ready in
Prep time: 10 minutes
Cook time: 6 to 8 hours

- Ingredients
- 2 lb chicken thighs or breasts, cut into bite-sized pieces
 - 1 onion, chopped
 - 3 or 4 cloves of garlic, minced
 - 1 tsp minced ginger
 - 15 oz tube of tomato paste
 - 1 heaping Tbsp curry
 - 114 oz coconut milk

- 1/2 cup Greek yogurt
 - 1/4 cup milk
 - 2 Tbsp coconut oil
 - small handful of cilantro for garnish
- Directions
1. Put everything in the slow cooker and stir it all around.
 2. Close the lid.
 3. Set the timer for 6 hours. Don't worry if you need to be away from home for 8 hours or longer — it will be okay.
 4. Serve with a big spoonful of jasmine rice and a sprinkling of cilantro.
